GHP News is excited to announce their annual Healthcare and Pharmaceutical Awards 2021.

The year of 2021 posed many threats to the health of millions worldwide, and as we continue to navigate through unprecedented times, the roles carried out by companies and individuals operating within healthcare and pharmaceutical sectors remain of critical importance.

Global Health & Pharma is proud to host the Healthcare & Pharmaceutical Awards for a sixth consecutive year and honour the innovation, determination and outstanding levels of care demonstrated by those who place our wellbeing at the forefront of their practice.

As in previous years, we will endeavour to ensure that only the most outstanding are recognised, therefore, all participants in the Healthcare & Pharmaceutical Awards will be judged purely on their merits. Our merit-driven approach allows for a more efficient method when determining those most deserving of winning an award and has brought us much success and commendation throughout its use.

Best Custom Polyclonal Antibody Production Company 2021

SICGEN Antibodies is a custom antibody creating business that has ingrained itself into rural farm life. In essence, by making itself a part of an existing ecosystem and naturalistically producing antibodies in goat herds, it is able to achieve a great number of antibodies per animal that increases accessibility and decreases cost for its clients. With the demand for antibody based medical solutions on the rise due to the Covid-19 outbreak, this is more pivotal than ever, and we checked in with the company behind it all to get a glimpse behind the curtain at its outstanding operation.

A European company that manufactures polyclonal antibodies for cell biology research, SICGEN Antibodies began in 2009. Fundamentally, whilst it started as a spin-off from the University of Coimbra's department by Dr José Ramalho and two other co-founders, it quickly became part of the NEOTEC Portuguese Initiative. In addition to this, in 2009, Dr José himself moved to NOVA University of Lisbon where he continues to ply his trade in cell biology and the development of new antibodies to this day, owning 50% of the SICGEN Antibodies portfolio by 2017 after a UK investor acquired the other 50% in February of that year.

Based in Coimbra, in a small village in the region where the production unit has developed an exemplary and large lab space to allow them to work, its complex also includes an animal house that allows them to keep track of the hundreds of antibodies produced in the herds of goats it has on site. An example of an exemplary modern biotechnological operation, SICGEN Antibodies has seamlessly integrated itself into a rural ecosystem that still produces goat cheese by traditional methods, an important source of income for many families in the vicinity that it helps to upkeep by supporting the farmers.

SICGEN Antibodies, therefore, has become an outstanding producer of polyclonal antibodies operating in an empathic and naturalistic manner that provides the highest quality products and services at the highest quality under the most competitive standards, prices, and standardized controls. As a result, its work has been used in a number of life science research areas, such as fluorescent proteins like GFP, mCherry, tdTomato and more, being featured in a multitude of peer reviewed publications as it becomes a cornerstone producer of custom antibodies for national and international institutes of learning, research, and pharmaceuticals.

Being one of the few antibody production companies in Europe, it has made a name for itself by creating affordable, accessible antibodies with its rigorously maintained and highly competitive operation, due to the type of animal it has chosen to work with. As it works with goats, it has a far higher rate of antibody production per animal, working in tandem with the local people in order to create a mutually beneficial ecosystem for the farmers and researchers alike, specializing in particular in raising antibodies against recombinant proteins and prizing itself on its immense flexibility.

Recently, it has pivoted to creating antibodies that can target SARS-Cov-2 in order to help researchers find methods to fight the pandemic. Having been financed by Portugal 2020 and I&D Covid-19, it was able to achieve this in relatively little time, allowing it to move quickly towards the encroaching future of its industry; in essence, it sees this future being heralded in by moving away from animal farms and towards in vitro technologies. By keeping its fingers on the pulse of these developments, it promises its clients that it will be keeping up, working hard to herald in this new, more versatile and ethically sound future as its size and adaptability continue to wow its market segment. With the urgent need for antibody products still in full swing, SICGEN Antibodies will be continuing to step up to the plate to help, working in collaboration with academics and clients to remain an international reference point for exemplary custom antibody creation.
